Description

Bronze sculpture with a brown and gold patina, depicting Hebe, goddess of youth, seated next to Jupiter's eagle, holding the cup intended for the nectar of the gods. Signed "J. Franceschi" on the base. Jules Franceschi (1825-1893), a French sculptor of Italian origin and a student of François Rude, is particularly admired for his mythologically inspired female figures, imbued with elegance and sensuality. The bronze rests on a substantial base of red griotte marble, which perfectly complements the richness of the patina.
