Description

A mid-19th-century larch cabinet from Italy, characterized by a simple and functional design typical of the period. The front door is paneled and divided into two sections, offering a classic and refined aesthetic. The side posts are angled at forty-five degrees, providing stability and adding a touch of originality to the structure. Inside, three shelves offer ample space for organizing and storing various items. The quality of the larch wood, prized for its durability and beauty, gives the cabinet a warm and inviting appearance, making it a piece suitable for various home settings. Product condition: This product requires restoration and re-polishing due to its age and wear. We strive to present the actual condition of the piece as thoroughly as possible through the photos.
