Description

Restoration-Period Walnut Cabinet - 19th Century
A beautiful Restoration-period cabinet made of walnut, dating from the first half of the 19th century, circa 1820-1830. It opens at the front with two large doors featuring molded panels, which beautifully highlight the walnut's natural grain. The lower section features a wide, full-depth drawer fitted with two bronze pull handles and accented by an elegant inlaid design of light-colored fillets. The upper crossbar is also adorned with a delicate inlay design forming geometric patterns, characteristic of the understated and refined taste of the Restoration period. The piece is crowned by a substantial, overhanging molded cornice, giving this cabinet a striking presence while maintaining very balanced lines. The interior, which offers ample
