Description

A small bronze animal sculpture signed by G. Tribout, depicting a dog grappling with a duck with its wings spread wide. The lively composition plays on the almost humorous nature of the scene: the dog seems to have provoked a genuine response from the bird, whose wing movements lend the entire piece a dynamic energy. The modeling is particularly meticulous despite the work's small size, with beautiful rendering of the plumage, fur, and naturalistic terrain. Work attributed to Georges-Henri Tribout (1884-1962), a French artist active primarily in the decorative arts and sculpture in the early 20th century. Bronze, circa 1920. Signed "G. Tribout" on the base.
