Description

Magnificent Louis XVI-style sideboard with marquetry, richly ornamented with gilded bronze, and a white veined marble top. Crafted by the Daïdé cabinetmaking workshop in Paris; a French piece dating from around 1950. René Daïdé remains modest, but with this distinction, he is being honored as one of the greatest cabinetmakers and marquetry artisans, at the helm of a company whose reputation has spread far beyond national borders. The Daïdé workshop, specializing in the reproduction of high-end furniture from the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, produces the finest pieces. A flagship of the national heritage--the equivalent, to draw a comparison that highlights the status of this craft, which isn't always in the spotlight, of the greatest names in haute couture.
