Description

A magnificent tablecloth made entirely of Luxeuil lace, dating from the Belle Époque (c. 1900-1920). It likely originated in the town of Luxeuil-les-Bains, France--a center that flourished between the Second Empire and the early 20th century, when thousands of lacemakers crafted such prestigious pieces for upper-bourgeois families. The workmanship is incredibly fine, featuring an interplay of sinuous Art Nouveau-style floral motifs, dense point d'esprit (dotted) stitches, and airy "spiderweb" decorative elements. Hundreds of hours of collective labor went into creating this pristine white showpiece. It is in good condition, despite a single repair--visible primarily when held against the light--and a few missing connecting threads that could be restored with patience. The
