Description

An elegant and unusual horn-shaped good-luck charm, crafted entirely from the finest hand-worked silver filigree from the early 20th century. The upper part opens via a hinge, revealing a hollow interior originally intended to hold a small wad of cotton soaked in perfume, essences, or aromatic substances. The filigree work displays exceptional craftsmanship, characterized by a dense and harmonious interweaving of openwork scrolls that create a delicate lace-like effect. It features a small ring clasp on the back, perfect for hanging from a chain as a pendant or from a collectible chatelaine. Condition as shown in the photos.
