Description

Large 8-foot mahogany dining table - Late 19th century
A beautiful, large mahogany dining table from the late 19th century. It features an elegant tabletop with rounded edges, accented by a molding around the perimeter, and rests on eight beautifully crafted turned mahogany legs. The table is equipped with an ingenious extension system that accommodates five extensions. Its substantial eight-leg base ensures excellent stability when the table is fully extended. With all five extension leaves in place, it reaches a generous length of 302 cm, comfortably seating numerous guests. When closed, its folding leaves significantly reduce its footprint. A beautiful, elegant, and functional reception table, featuring a lovely patina and the warm, rich hues of antique mahogany. Period: late 19th century Material:
