Description

Natala Attanasio: "The Girl Leafing Through the Album," dated 1896. A painter from Catania of remarkable skill and imagination, and a student of Domenico Morelli, Attanasio was a notable artist who, unfortunately, was never consistently recognized for his merits. In fact, a painter gains prestige and recognition primarily in his home region, but in this case, Natale was never rewarded for his... origins. Catania, a dynamic and vibrant city, has never truly valued its own artists, and Attanasio is proof of this, as he is more highly regarded in Rome--which hosted him during his artistic development--than in Sicily. In the painting "The Girl Leafing Through the Album," she is portrayed with realism blended with an energetic psychological introspection, which makes the scene come alive...
