Description

A charming late 18th-century painting in the style of J.J. Rousseau, depicting my mother--the center of the family in the upbringing of the children, a theme dear to this waning century as people returned to fundamental values-- the elegant lady, the focal point of all attention, surrounded by her children and a close-knit household staff. An idealistic vision just before the French Revolution, brought to life through its numerous figures and animals. A lovely paradise, this "Marie Antoinette" in a warm and rich setting; this elegant trumeau, with its delicate beaded molding and beautiful original tin finish, has everything to charm with its size and delightful subject--a painting full of tenderness and very well composed in its details, enhanced by the patina of age. This piece is in very good
