Description

Portrait of a Young Woman with a Yellow Scarf, by Jean-Gabriel DOMERGUE (1889-1962), possibly depicting his favorite model: Nadine LHOPITALIER, the future Baroness de ROTCHILD. This portrait is emblematic of the style of this painter, who was one of the greatest French painters of elegant, society women in the first half of the 20th century. The model, depicted in a three-quarter view, wears an elegant yellow scarf adorned with flowers. The blue-green background and luminous color palette particularly highlight the model's red hair. The composition and the energetic, lively treatment, executed with a confident brushstroke, are characteristic of DOMERGUE's refined aesthetic. The work is signed in the lower right corner. This large-format oil on canvas is presented in its
