Description

Painting depicting a path leading to either a Corsican house or a Provençal farmhouse. Beautiful harmony of colors and a thick, visible brushstroke, evoking certain characteristics of Post-Impressionism. Good overall condition. Dates from the early 20th century. Dimensions: Framed: 55x39 cm Artwork only: 48x31 cm Marcel Dominique Poggioli (1882-1959) was a painter of Corsican origin who studied at the fine arts schools in Marseille and Paris. After a stay in Italy, he returned to Marseille, where he participated in various art exhibitions. He primarily painted Provençal and Corsican landscapes, took on commissions for decorative projects, and created illustrations for books. In 1921, he was appointed professor of drawing and decorative arts at the Beaux-Arts in
