A beautiful Louis XIII-style chest of drawers or single-door cabinet that opens with a door on the front. It rests on two ball-shaped legs in the front and two straight legs in the back. The door is beautifully crafted and consists of three panels carved with diamond-point motifs. The sides are paneled. This piece features several types of wood: cherry (particularly on the front), oak, and various other woods for the rest of the cabinet. The interior of this piece is lined with a patterned fabric on a red background (please note a few stains). The back panels are very thick. A beautifully crafted piece from the 19th century incorporating older components. Please note: The two rear legs have been shortened by approximately five centimeters; the two ball-shaped feet, as well as the base molding
