Description

A charming French rustic chest from around 1900, crafted in solid oak with a warm, natural patina. The piece features a simple rectangular form elevated on block feet, its lid secured by an original wrought-iron lock plate and strap hinges. One hinge is missing, and the key is no longer present; details that underscore its authentic age and character.

Inside, a small compartment divider remains intact, hinting at its original use for storing linens or valuables. The chest's honest construction and time-worn surface make it a beautiful example of rural French craftsmanship at the turn of the century; functional, tactile, and full of history.
