Description

This work depicts a young blonde girl sitting on a sandy embankment, at the edge of a path or a stream. Dressed simply, the child is slightly leaning forward in an almost meditative pose. Her gaze, turned to the side, lends the scene an introspective and sensitive quality. The color palette is dominated by warm, earthy tones: ochres, sandy yellows, and muted greens combine to create a luminous landscape bathed in a calm atmosphere. This oil on canvas belongs to a naturalist or realist tradition, possibly influenced by late 19th-century European painting. Note the generous black frame, which highlights the ochre and yellow tones of the painting.
