Description

A pair of flintlock pistols, known as "tromblons," with short stocks and flared barrels. The flintlock mechanisms are of different designs, with brass counterplates. The barrels are made of steel inlaid with silver, forming a vegetation motif. The stocks are inlaid with mother-of-pearl and steel tips. Everything is in working order; one ramrod is missing. These tromblons are of Eastern origin; I believe they were made in Turkey around 1880 with 18th-century European flintlock mechanisms.
