Description

Oil on panel. Dated June 1970. There she is, icy and golden, an immaculate apparition of white silk that imposes itself--with the subtle disdain of blue blood--upon the gray puzzle of a domesticated Cubism. The painting is the notarized testimony of a marriage of convenience--inevitable and so characteristic of its era--in which the avant-garde, already lukewarm and transformed into an elegant tapestry, submits unconditionally to the carnal attributes of opulence. She is the heir to all of this, the perfect, blonde trophy of a capitalism that allows itself the luxury of flirting with abstraction, provided the portrait is flattering. Her features are not broken--no; geometry simply envelops her like precious wrapping paper, in a gray scale of planes that feign rebellion but serve
