Description

Enameled iron garden table from the 1960s, featuring a sturdy and decorative white frame. The oval, clear glass top blends perfectly with the sinuous design of the base, adding a touch of elegance and lightness. Ideal for outdoor spaces, this table is a prime example of mid-century modern furniture that combines functionality and aesthetics, typical of the design of that era. The enameled iron finish ensures weather resistance, making it suitable for gardens and patios. Product Condition: Product in fair condition, showing some signs of wear. We strive to present the actual condition as fully as possible through the photos. If certain details are not clear from the photos, the information provided in the description takes precedence.
