Description

Directoire-style walnut desk - Circa 1900 An elegant Directoire-style walnut desk, made around 1900, which exquisitely captures the neoclassical style of the late 18th century. Rectangular in shape, it features a beautiful walnut top, whose grain and warm patina particularly highlight the quality of the wood. The front features three drawers arranged in a row. The central drawer is accented by an elegant band of molding forming a diamond shape, while the two side drawers are adorned with carved rosettes, themselves framed by geometric moldings. This understated decorative work lends the piece a great deal of character without weighing down its silhouette. The piece rests on four tapered, turned legs accented with rings, directly inspired by Directoire-era
