Description

Important rosewood display cabinet with a back panel - Napoleon III period
Important display cabinet with a back panel from the Napoleon III period, made of wood and what is believed to be rosewood veneer. This piece features an elegant curved front opening with two glass doors, framed by rich carved ornamentation of scrolls, foliage, flowers, volutes, and rocaille motifs. The interior includes several shelves for displaying a collection of objects. The upper section is crowned by an imposing, openwork, and dynamically shaped pediment, adorned with beveled mirrors and extensive carved decoration in high relief. The sides of the cabinet are also curved and glazed. A beautiful piece of cabinetry, particularly decorative and characteristic of the opulent taste of the second half of the 19th
