Description

A lovely pilgrim's flask made of Nevers earthenware dating from the 18th century. It features a monochromatic blue design on a white background depicting a figure (likely a pilgrim) set against a landscape on one side, and an interesting composition of vases and a table in the Chinese style on the other side. The object is framed by two handles, and the base has two holes for threading a cord. Note an old chip on the neck; otherwise, it is in very good condition. Nevers, 18th century.
