Description

A very important ceremonial armchair with a high back, made of solid walnut in the Renaissance-Louis XIII style. This majestic chair rests on four turned legs, connected by an H-shaped crossbar. The "crosse"-shaped armrests are finished with scrollwork. The large, tall rectangular backrest is framed by two columns, each topped at the ends with a cube adorned with a rounded relief decoration and surmounted by finials. This backrest is crowned by a pediment consisting of a central cartouche flanked by two horizontal consoles. The upholstery has recently been completely redone, providing great comfort with a very firm seat. The upholstery has also been replaced; a small-dot tapestry was specially made for this chair, and only the original garnet-colored velvet fabric on the back of the
