A Victorian table made of solid mahogany dating from the 19th century. The tabletop, with its slightly rounded corners, rests on a beautiful apron and four turned legs, typical of English furniture from the Victorian era. The table is equipped with a central-mechanism extension system, allowing the tabletop to be extended by turning a crank. The mechanism, visible beneath the tabletop, attests to the ingenious design and high-quality craftsmanship of this piece. The legs are fitted with small casters to make it easy to move. 1 extension leaf: 60 x 107
