Description

19th-century bronze sculpture depicting a blacksmith. France. This sculpture depicts a blacksmith taking a break; he is wearing the typical attire of the trade, notably the long protective apron and his headgear. He is depicted resting a hammer on an anvil. The work belongs to the French Symbolist sculpture movement, which aims to exalt the virtue of labor. We can observe a strong sense of realism in the body's anatomy; in fact, the muscular definition is quite pronounced. Dimensions: height 46 cm, width 13 cm, depth 13 cm
