Description

A splendid oil on canvas depicting a scene in which Christ is mocked, dating from the first half of the 17th century, likely painted by a Flemish artist working in northern Italy; specifically, it is possible that the artist was active in Lombardy. The painting demonstrates the skill and quality of execution of this artist, who certainly adhered to the Caravaggist style and was able to balance the figures effectively; they are thus bathed in a frontal light that sets the figures in relief against the total darkness of the background. The painting is in excellent condition and is mounted in an antique late 17th-century frame, lacquered to imitate marble. The canvas measures 64 cm x 84 cm; the frame's exterior dimensions are 80 cm x 101 cm. We include with the sale a certificate of authenticity attesting to
