Description

The technique used appears to be ink on paper, with remarkable attention to architectural details and the dramatic perspectives typical of the Baroque period, as well as a figurative composition executed with a fresh, lively touch. The subject may be related to biblical narratives such as the Donation of Constantine or similar scenes featuring figures on thrones and monumental columns from Roman history. Northern Italy or France, early 18th century. The original antique paper has been mounted on a sturdier paper backing for conservation purposes.
