Description

A 750/°° white gold (18 KT, owl hallmark) ball ring, accented with gold plating, featuring a beautifully voluminous design entirely encrusted with a generous pavé of grain-set brilliant-cut diamonds. The setting is almost entirely hidden beneath the diamonds: particularly dense and executed with great finesse, the setting reveals only the succession of stones and their sparkle. The diamonds thus cover the entire domed surface of the ring, from its top to its edge, fully emphasizing its volume and creating a remarkable play of light. The exceptional quality of the setting work is also evident in the uniformity of the pavé: the stones, arranged as closely as possible to one another, form a continuous, sparkling surface, while the delicacy of the grains allows the diamonds to take center stage. A few diamonds also adorn the shoulders of the ring, ensuring a harmonious transition between the band and its striking central motif. The gold plating applied to the white gold gives the setting a warm tone that blends subtly with the pavé and highlights the myriad hues produced by the diamonds' fire. Depending on the light and the angle from which the ring is viewed, its surface shifts from an almost white brilliance to warmer, golden reflections. Despite its generous size, the ring's design maintains a beautiful balance when worn. Its domed profile and proportions give it a bold, jewel-like presence--particularly noticeable when worn--while the band remains relatively discreet beneath the design to allow the spectacular effect of the pavé dome to take center stage. A contemporary ring with sculptural volume and timeless aesthetics, whose strength lies as much in the generosity of its pavé setting as in the remarkable finesse of its craftsmanship.
