Description

Beautiful and imposing 18th-century Emilian sideboard credenza, made of walnut and featuring four doors to the front and two elegant bowed doors to the sides. The piece has a structure articulated by three uprights with framed rectangular panels, and a substantial top with an elegant ogee-moulded edge. The moulded base rests on bracket feet. Of particular note is the fine quality of the walnut, with its warm tones and rich grain, which enhances the understated elegance of the piece. The sideboard retains its original hardware, including the iron locks and hinges, as well as its original structural elements: the interior still preserves its shelves and original back. The integrity of the structure and the preservation of the original hardware and interior elements contribute to the authentic character and
