Description

A pair of Italian landscapes in the style of 17th-century vedute and architectural capricci, depicting ancient architecture, landscapes, and scenes featuring figures going about their daily lives. The first composition depicts a riverside landscape animated by figures, horsemen, and a horse-drawn carriage, dominated by an imposing structure on the right and ancient buildings, such as a tower, on the left. The second depicts a city teeming with figures, featuring majestic classical architecture and a wide-open perspective onto the landscape. Oils on canvas mounted on old frames, with some missing sections and imperfections. The canvas does not appear to have been re-stretched but shows signs of use, including scratches, wear, and superficial marks. Italy, 17th century height 115 cm 150 x 3
