Description

Stunning late 19th-century bronze: The Blacksmith by Edouard DROUOT. A magnificent patinated bronze sculpture depicting a young blacksmith at the anvil, a striking example of late 19th-century French academic and realist art. The artist glorifies the craftsman's gesture with remarkable strength and precision: the supple drape of the open shirt, the tension in the muscles before the exertion, and the realistic rendering of the tools (hammer, anvil, tongs) lend this work a presence that is both noble and dynamic. Signed EDOUARD DROUOT (1859-1945), a renowned French sculptor, medalist at the Salon des Artistes Français and the 1900 World's Fair, famous for his allegorical compositions and highly expressive figures of laborers. Bronze with a nuanced brown patina,
