

Early 19th-century Regency-period Mahogany Standing Dressing Mirror

3 300 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Mahogany

Width : 73

Height : 181

Depth : 67

Description

A Superb Regency Period Mahogany Cheval Dressing MirrorA magnificent and highly impressive early 19th-century Regency period cheval dressing mirror, crafted from superb-quality, richly figured solid Cuban mahogany and retaining its original mirror plate.The cross-grain molded frame is supported by exceptionally elegant turned and spiral-reeded uprights with solid reeded intersections, showcasing the very finest cabinetmaking of the period. The original mirror plate displays only slight, attractive foxing, entirely consistent with a plate of this age and adding to its authentic character. The mirror frame is held in place by finely turned supports featuring original finials at the top, wooden knob-style side adjusters, and a turned stretcher below, leading to beautifully

Dealer

Anthony Short Antiques

18C & 19C Fine Period Antiques, Decorative Furniture & Works of Art

Tel : 00 44 7595603348

Mobile : 00 44 7595603348

Market Square

Petworth GU28 0AH

shaped splayed supports resting on finely cast brass casters shaped like hairy paws. On the reverse, the mirror retains its original mahogany-paneled back, a clear indication of its superior construction and quality. Flanking the mirror is a pair of original ormolu swinging candle arms, providing both practical lighting and refined decorative appeal. The entire piece stands on four sweeping, saber-shaped, flared legs, joined by turned crossbars and ending in the original brass casters, giving the piece great presence and elegance. In very good condition for its age, this full-length mirror is structurally sound and ready to be placed directly in a home. It boasts a deep, rich patina developed over two centuries, underscoring both its quality and careful preservation. This Regency-period cheval mirror is not only a superb example of early 19th-century English craftsmanship but also a distinguished statement piece, perfect for a refined bedroom, dressing room, or any elegant interior seeking a classic focal point.