Description

A superb, large ceremonial candelabrum (or candlestick) from the Ottoman period, dating from the late 19th century or around 1900. A monumental piece of exceptional craftsmanship, ideal for a distinctive interior or for collectors of Islamic and Oriental art. In terms of its size and structure, this piece resembles the large light fixtures found in mosques or grand period interiors, sharing the imposing presence of large European church chandeliers. Material: Solid bronze (or heavy solid brass) with a beautiful antique patina. Chisel work: The baluster-style shaft and the central cup are entirely hand-engraved. The octagonal base features magnificent cartouches adorned with stylized geometric and floral motifs typical of Oriental art. Structure: Sturdy traditional design. The
