Description

We are pleased to present this majestic 17th-century Italian antique chest. Crafted from solid walnut, its deep brown color boasts a warm and inviting patina, enhanced by the visible grain and natural signs of aging that attest to its age, giving it a distinctive, well-worn appearance. Featuring a large and imposing lid, its thick, smooth surface is finished along the lower edge with a carved, serrated molding. The front is divided into elegant geometric panels with raised frames: two large horizontal panels flank a narrower central section that houses the lock. The sides echo the square motif of the front and feature sturdy original wrought-iron handles to facilitate lifting. The lid opens to reveal a spacious and practical storage compartment, while on the left side, a small compartment with a wooden lid can be used to store small items (it originally had a lock, which is now missing). The chest rests on a projecting, contoured base, supported by shaped bracket feet. Noteworthy are the antique lock and key. This type of chest was originally intended primarily to hold bedding, such as blankets or sheets, and was placed at the foot of the bed. Today, its placement in the home is extremely versatile; it can be useful in any room and become a distinctive feature of your decor thanks to its antique charm. Wherever you decide to place it, it will be a splendid addition to your home, offering functionality and a piece of Italian history to your decor. Please note that it is in excellent condition; we have performed a conservative restoration that has not erased its charming signs of age but will allow you to place it in your home immediately.
