Description

This magnificent portrait, created in France in the early 19th century, represents an outstanding example of historical Empire-era lithography. The portrait depicts Jean-Baptiste Bernadotte, the famous Marshal of France during the time of Napoleon, who later became King of Sweden and Norway under the name Charles XIV Johan. The sheet was executed by the Parisian workshop of François-Séraphin Delpech (1778-1825), one of the leading publishers of portrait lithography of the Restoration era, after a drawing by the French Romantic painter Jean-Baptiste Mauzaisse (1784-1844), a master of battle scenes and formal portraits, a pupil of François-André Vincent, and an exhibitor at the Salon since 1808. The artist masterfully succeeded in conveying not only ceremonial grandeur, but also the strong-willed,
