Description

A charming antique sailor-made ship in a bottle, dating from the late 19th or early 20th century. The detailed model represents a four-masted sailing ship, probably a barque, with a black-painted hull, deck structures, spars and an intricate arrangement of standing and running rigging. It is housed within a reused Grande Chartreuse liqueur bottle, retaining the sandblasted "Gde Chartreuse" lettering and stars. The bottle is further embellished with woven textile bands, adding greatly to its authentic maritime folk-art character. The photographs really do not do this wonderful little work of art justice. I found it extremely difficult to focus upon the model because of the numerous reflections in the curved glass. Length: 24 cm. Good condition. SOLD WITH A
