Description

An elegant regional display cabinet made of molded and carved walnut, crafted in the 19th century in the 18th-century style. Narrow and slender in shape, it opens at the front with a large, four-pane glass door, surmounted by a scalloped transom. The lower section features a drawer that is also carved. The piece is crowned by a large, ornate cornice, known as a "gendarme's hat." The upper crossbar features rich carved decoration consisting of a basket of flowers surrounded by branches and small blossoms. This same naturalistic motif is found on the side panels, the drawer, and the lower crossbar, which is adorned with a central bouquet. The rounded front side panels extend down to curved legs that end in scrollwork. The door retains a beautiful, finely cut brass keyhole. The interior, lined with a
