Description

This oil on panel, measuring 21 x 26 cm (viewing area), is a characteristic work by the French painter Paul François Marie Urtin (1874-1962). Representative of his work from the first half of the 20th century--dated circa 1920--it illustrates the artist's favorite theme: interior scenes focused on the study of light and perspective. The composition centers on a parlor furnished with a chest of drawers topped by a trumeau, a cabriolet armchair, and Louis XV- or Louis XVI-style chairs. The painter's work focuses on the backlighting effects created by the tall open window on the left, whose light reflects off a waxed floor with reddish hues and an Oriental rug in the foreground. The brushwork is fluid, inspired by Impressionism, prioritizing atmosphere and the play of light over strict
