Description

An elegant zoomorphic bronze inkwell with a medal-like patina, depicting a hunting dog holding a duck in its mouth, rendered in a particularly expressive naturalistic style. The animal, depicted from the front, displays remarkable precision in the modeling of the head, coat, and ears, while the duck with outstretched wings forms the base and pedestal of the piece. The composition, both decorative and picturesque, reflects the late 19th- and early 20th-century taste for art and desk objects featuring animal motifs. Original inkwell, integrated into the composition. Charles Mildé's workshops, located in Levallois-Perret, were renowned for their metalwork and artistic bronze pieces for furniture, decorative objects, and works of art. Signed "Fonderie CH MILDÉ, Levallois"
