Description

Beautiful silver sculpture of a "knight in armor," Hanau, 19th century. A very finely detailed silver sculpture depicting a knight with his shield, armor, and sword, set on a beautiful pedestal. The knight's face is made of ivory, and the helmet opens and closes. The sculpture is made of silver, partially gold-plated; it bears the 800 hallmark on its base as well as another hallmark. Hallmark: the woman accompanied by two children is an allegorical representation of Charitas (charity). This is a very well-known and significant pseudo-hallmark from Hanau, which directly identifies the silversmith in question. Creator of the sculpture: Ludwig Neresheimer & Co., founded in 1890 in Hanau. This firm was world-renowned for its high-quality silver objects in the "historicist" style.
