Description

18th-Century Lombard Cabinet The marquetry work is extraordinary! The upper frieze, lacquered black, creates a striking contrast with the urn adorned with foliage and acanthus leaves, all enhanced by a base molding. In the center, the motifs are framed by a frieze featuring rosettes and stylized leaves. The numerous boxwood fillets brilliantly combine grain-on-grain and cross-grain patterns. The incredibly delicate marquetry depicts a shepherd and his dog, and a huntress posing on a drapery. The background is adorned with shrubs and hills; a base and a reclining column complete the scene. The sides, also inlaid, depict a peasant woman with her basket and a gentleman embracing his cow. The legs are decorated with musical motifs, trailing vines, and stylized palmettes. The inner and outer legs are also inlaid. The whole is enhanced by a lightly carved cove molding. The tabletop features a blue monticole in the center and a stylized animal at each corner. The back, the bottom, and the interior contrast with their simplicity and rustic charm. Probably used as a salt cabinet, its proportions, originality, and elegance make it a rare piece. On its own, it invites one to embark on a journey, and no one yet knows its destination. Delivery available (not included in the price).
