Description

Nymph Contemplating a Pair of Birds -- 19th-Century French SchoolPeriod: 19th century (circa 1830-1850)Medium: Oil on panelCondition: Very good original condition.
Previously cleaned; slight signs of wear on the frame's gilding. A charming 19th-century oil painting depicting a nymph reclining on her back on a bright red drape, in the heart of a woodland glade. The young woman's gaze is directed toward the upper part of the composition, captivated by a pair of birds perched on a branch illuminated by a ray of light.The artist plays on a strong contrast between the lightness of the flesh, the brilliance of the drapery, and the shadows of the foliage. This bucolic and poetic scene is in the academic and Romantic tradition, blending the study of the nude with the observation of
