Description

A charming and graceful 19th-century Italian alabaster sculpture, in the Renaissance style, depicting a woman with downcast eyes, her head covered by a veil draped over her damask bodice with a wide collar; the regular features of her beautiful, serene face are striking; could she be a saint or a lady-in-waiting deep in thought? Only the artist Bosio, who signed it, knows the answer. The beige onyx column and its imposing Corinthian capital in patinated bronze showcase this work by an accomplished artist--a beautiful, decorative ensemble inspired by nostalgia for times past. Furthermore, this high-quality piece is in good condition and highly decorative--a beautiful work that is certainly not without interest...
