Description

An elegant English sideboard (late 18th century) dating from the late 18th century, crafted from fine mahogany with a splendid flamed grain that adorns the entire surface. The piece features a top drawer and two doors below, both finished with simple, balanced paneling in perfect late Georgian style. The sides feature refined carvings of floral motifs, executed with great artisanal skill, while the chiseled brass ring handles add a touch of elegance typical of the period. The piece is topped by a Bardiglio gray marble slab, characterized by delicate shades that provide contrast and luminosity. A highly charming piece of furniture, ideal for classic settings or to add an element of distinction to contemporary interiors. Perfectly preserved and of considerable historical and decorative value. Period: Late 18th
