Description

Elegant and refined, this small Transition-style dressing table captivates with the subtle balance of its curved lines, the richness of its mahogany veneer, and the delicacy of its gilded bronze ornamentation. A charming piece of furniture, both decorative and functional, that showcases remarkable cabinetmaking craftsmanship. Its kidney-shaped top is adorned with a mahogany veneer arranged in the shape of butterfly wings, highlighting the wood's natural, warm grain. The design is accentuated by an elegant brass trim, adding a precious and luminous touch to the silhouette. The front features two drawers, each equipped with its own lock, keyhole, and delicate bronze leaf-shaped handles, whose design subtly emphasizes the piece's neoclassical character. The lower section is adorned with beautiful shell-shaped trim, while the leg posts are embellished with bronze finials, adding rhythm and sophistication to the design. The piece rests on four curved legs, characteristic of French furniture from this elegant period, which give it a light, slender, and particularly graceful silhouette. Inside, this dressing table reveals a cleverly concealed feature: a mirror mounted on a top that opens and locks shut, accompanied by small storage compartments for keeping jewelry, accessories, and personal items out of sight. With its combination of precious woods, bronze, and refined details, this small dressing table embodies all the charm of French Transition-style furniture. A captivating piece, ideal for adding a touch of timeless elegance to a bedroom, a walk-in closet, or a collector's home.*****Period: 1940In very good condition following restoration in our cabinetmaking workshopSlight marks on the mirror2 keysDelivery available upon quote in France and internationallyDimensions:Width: 63 cmDepth: 40 cmHeight: 72 cmReference: 663V
