Description

This bronze sculpture with a brown patina, depicting a Bacchante, stands out for the harmony of its forms and the delicacy of its modeling. The figure, crowned with finely chiseled leaves and berries, gracefully embodies the Dionysian spirit, blending sensuality and abandon. Her abundant hair, animated by supple movements, envelops her face with a vibrant presence, while her slightly idealized features lend the whole a serene and almost dreamlike expression. The drapery covering the shoulders falls in natural folds, revealing the sculptor's mastery in rendering materials and volumes. The work rests on a simple pedestal that emphasizes the bust's verticality and reinforces its classical allure, giving the piece a noble and refined presence typical of creations inspired by antiquity. Period: Early 20th
