Description

A large statue display case serving as a reliquary, carved and painted from solid wood. Carved from a single block of walnut, this large display case exhibits all the stylistic characteristics of the mid-17th century, still at the transition between the LXIII and LXIV styles. With powerful, highly architectural lines, it features a central niche whose opening is encircled by an elliptical medallion, designed to house a few relics. Vigorous, precise, and detailed carving on three sides, with a beautiful original polychrome patina and overall in excellent condition. A truly spectacular display piece, of obvious decorative interest, which will once again showcase a large piece of religious (or other!) statuary. The top shelf, designed to hold the statue, measures 33 x 20 cm across the axis....Work dating from the
