Description

Large seascape oil-on-canvas painting, early 20th-century Provençal School, signed Van Den Bussche (1892-1975), depicting the Gulf of St. Tropez facing its iconic Church of Notre Dame de l'Assomption; the foreground is brought to life by sailboats known as "tartanes" and fishermen unloading their catch into their rowboats. A beautiful Impressionist composition, highly representative of this painter's work, this vibrant piece is brought to life by a generous application of paint and a dazzling palette characterized by a rich and confident layering of paint, giving the painting a striking sense of depth; the colors--deep blue, incandescent red, and solar yellow interact with energy. One can sense the painter's brushwork, spontaneity, and freedom; the classic gilded wooden frame subtly balances this
