Description

Oil on canvas, 20th-century French School. Post-Impressionist painter, born in the Rhône department (in Caluire), Robert Lavoine was a 20th-century French landscape painter. He is very often associated with the Expressionist movement of the École de Paris, in the same vein as artists such as Élisée Maclet, Paul-Émile Pissarro, and Paul Genin. He painted numerous rural landscapes (Normandy, Brie, and various riversides), as well as urban views and scenes of Paris. Known for his vigorous brushwork and bold colors, which lend great dynamism to his landscapes. He participated in the Salon des Indépendants and taught at the École des Beaux-Arts in Rouen. The painting above depicts a lovely, peaceful view with bucolic charm. It is signed on the back
