Description

An elegant, finely chiseled gilded bronze sculpture from the late 19th century, circa 1900, by the artist Dominique ALONZO (19th-20th centuries), signed "D. Alonzo" on the pedestal. An Orientalist-inspired composition featuring a classical female figure embodying the attributes of Hebe, holding the ewer and the cup of divine nectar; she is dressed in a sumptuous, antiquity-inspired costume whose soft drapery elegantly highlights the grace of her posture, her waist is adorned with a Jambiya dagger tucked into her belt, symbolizing honor and prestige; she rests on an oblong terrace decorated with heart-strip motifs. In good overall condition, with beautiful gilding; dimensions: 40 cm high × 18 cm wide. Dominique Alonzo was a French sculptor and a student of Alexandre Falguière;
