Description

A rare antique carved wooden cane depicting a fantastic creature--such as a griffin or chimera--grappling with a serpent whose head forms the continuation of the shaft. Features fine openwork, full-relief carving with exquisite detailing of feathers, scales, wings, and talons. Beautiful antique patina and signs of use. Late 19th to early 20th century. Height: 78 cm. Condition: significant, long-standing loss to the tip of the creature's tail (visible in photographs); wear and minor damage consistent with age. A distinctive piece of European folk art, highly decorative and ideal for collectors of carved canes. For inquiries: +33778337598.
